Throughout the entire eastern, and most of the western cities, the journeymen of almost all trades have struck for higher wages. by no means general. But the strikes are evidently the foundation for an entire revolution in various branches of business. The result seems likely to be, that hereafter, much of the labor which has heretofore been performed by men, will be done by women and girls. Boston has been in the advance in this movement, and New York is fast pursuing the same course. A number of the New York printers have introduced girls, and are teaching them the business. So far as book estabstrike will be to enlarge the sphere of employment for females.
